over the last 25 years reading processes have been the focus of an enormous amount of research in experimental psychology as well as in other disciplines the theories and models emerging from this research have greatly advanced understanding of both normal acquisition and of reading disabilities although great progress has been made there are certain aspects that have been relatively neglected in the current understanding specifically the role of visual factors has received less attention than that of other component processes this is particularly surprising since reading and writing are distinct from the other language processes of speaking and listening in large part by virtue of the fact that a visual dimension is involved relevant research is broadly scattered both geographically and in terms of disciplines and there have been no major reviews or books concerned with the visual dimension of reading and reading disabilities the purpose of this book is to bring together a broad range of evidence that concerns the role of visual information in reading and reading disabilities because reading processes are of central interest to cognitive scientists neuropsychologists psycholinguists clinicians and educators this book should draw a very broad readership
