the defence committee report recommends that when troops are committed to operations in future there must be robust plans to coordinate military and reconstruction efforts from the earliest stages the next government should lay out the requirements of the comprehensive approach the combination of civilian and military actors in a counter insurgency operation in order better to preserve all the lessons learned in the complex operations of iraq and afghanistan many of them having been painfully re learned from bosnia kosovo and even malaya the committee looks to the recently formed stabilisation unit owned by the department for international development the foreign and commonwealth office and the ministry of defence to maintain a capacity to deploy significant numbers of personnel for post conflict reconstruction and to ensure that vital knowledge and skills gained during deployments in iraq and afghanistan are retained and built on the comprehensive approach requires close work with local nationals to build up their capability and confidence in all fields including security governance law and order and development this must include women at all levels the government needs to find better ways to draw on the expertise of ngos without compromising the effectiveness and safety of aid workers on the ground ulcerative colitis represents an immune mediated inflammatory disorder with an increasing incidence worldwide the pathogenesis is considered multifactorial and is not yet fully understood the disease impairs the quality of life of these patients due to intestinal symptoms and frequent association with extraintestinal manifestations despite advances in pharmacological approaches to the disease only a part of the patients will respond to these novel treatments many of them needing hospitalization and some of them even undergoing colectomy this book aims to provide an overview of modern concepts related to the diagnostic assessment of ulcerative colitis and its pharmacological and surgical management through its updated scientific content and the valuable knowledge offered by authors with vast experience in this field the book takes a step forward in understanding this complex disease which may be extremely challenging for clinicians as the agricultural transformation associated with economic development proceeds the economic fulcrum of the agrifood system moves from on farm or primary production activities to activities that are increasingly non farm sector based such as agro processing food services wholesale and retail trade etc therefore the traditional measures of farm employment and value addition or gdp come to represent a smaller and smaller share of the total contribution of the agrifood system better quantification is important not only to appreciate the transformation within the agrifood system with economic development but also to inform better policies and strategies to create more and better quality jobs and accelerate structural transformation in developing economies there are two broad approaches to measuring the size of the agrifood sector tracking activity in agrifood sectors and exploiting the full structure of the economy to assess the direct and indirect employment required to meet final demand for agrifood products both approaches are used in an analysis based on the global gtap database and their results compared the findings suggest that the final demand approach provides a more comprehensive assessment of the economic activities needed to meet final demand with agrifood sector accounting for a much larger share of gdp and the broader agrifood sector generating more and better quality skilled jobs for both male and female workers another key aspect of the relationship is the resources needed to produce non food products such as biofuels clothing and leather products that rely on agricultural inputs including the resources needed to produce non food agrifood outputs substantially increases the importance of the agrifood sector in overall activity and employment the authors survey general revenue and demographic issues and then analyze the five policy areas education corrections transportation welfare and health that consume 84.3% of the state budget and that in terms of both cost and controversy rank highest on the state's policy agenda emerging from this analysis is the disturbing consensus that Kansas is an increasingly divided state one urban younger and wealthier the other rural older and poorer a collection of thirteen essays considered classics in the field of urban politics from leading scholar Clarence Stone with new essays by the editors and by Stone himself that contextualize the impact of his previous works and suggest new directions for researchers the authors of this volume argue that urban education is in urgent need of reform and that although there have been plenty of innovative and even promising attempts to improve conditions most have been doomed the reason for this they agree lies in the failure of our major cities to develop their civic capacity the ability to build and maintain a broad social and political coalition across all sectors of the urban community in pursuit of a common goal this report is about energy efficient site and neighborhood design it examines recent experiences of local governments that have adopted new development regulation or amended existing ones to promote energy conservation alternative renewable sources an account of the link between Locke's thought and the American founding the author argues that previous writers have misread Locke's influence on the founders he portrays the philosopher as a moderate 17th century moralist advocating an individualism that fits well with classic republicanism
