this book examines how the roman french and english legal systems have each dealt with the issue of unforeseen supervening events which have rendered the performance of contractual obligations either impossible or fundamentally different in nature sometimes known as force majeure or acts of god although the roman french and english laws of contract have each developed legal rules which address this issue the approach adopted by each system is significantly different from that of the others the thesis of this book is that the response of a legal system to unforeseen supervening events derives primarily from the nature and structure of that legal system as a whole and then within that broader context from the salient characteristics of that system's particular law of contract. The work compares the differing nature and structure of the Roman, French and English legal systems and their respective laws of contract in order to demonstrate how this is so. The book will be a valuable guide for academics and researchers working in the areas of comparative law, legal history, legal theory and contract law. As the English approach to unforeseen supervening events is very different from that of the French, the book will be of benefit both to English and to French practitioners as they seek to understand how supervening events are dealt with across the channel. It will also appeal to law students as a guide for studying comparative law.

Promoting a learning-by-doing approach to comparative contract law and comparative methodology, this updated second edition of Comparative Contract Law updates the first true student reader on the subject, bringing together extracts from legislation and court practice. This textbook lets students experience comparative law in action and presents a unique guide to European and international contract law.

This book offers a genealogy of the core concepts of Indian contract law, tracing their trajectory from the nineteenth-century soil of English jurisprudence in which they germinated to their transplantation into the Indian Contract Act 1872 and the interpretation of the provisions containing these concepts by Indian courts and influential treatise writers over the last one hundred and fifty years. The concepts studied by the book are: i) formation, ii) consideration, iii) privity, iv) capacity, v) consent, vi) frustration, vii) damages, viii) stipulated sums and ix) unjustified enrichment. With respect to each of these concepts, the book seeks to provide an account of the state of the English law at the eve of the drafting of the act with a particular emphasis on the impact the civil law had on the concept and a close study of the legislative history of the provisions of the act codifying the concept with a view to uncovering what the drafters had originally envisaged based on extensive doctrinal and archival research the book offers a historical background to the drafting of the indian contract act and the codification process a jurisprudential exploration of the limitations of common law codification gleaned from the working of the act the draft of the contract code accompanying the report of the indian law commissioners in 1866 which is essential to understand the intention of the drafters of the act historical insights which hold the key to illuminating contemporary contract law problems of the kind courts routinely grapple with
