the second volume of Robert M. Doran's magisterial The Trinity in History continues his exploration of the trinitarian theology of Bernard Lonergan focusing now on the notions of relations and persons and connecting the systematic proposals with the so-called third quest for the historical Jesus. Doran not only interprets Lonergan's major work in trinitarian theology and Christology but also suggests at least a twofold advance: a new version of the psychological analogy for understanding trinitarian doctrine and a new starting point for the whole of systematic theology. He links these theological concerns with René Girard's mimetic theory, proposes a theory of history based in Lonergan's scale of values, and creates a link between exegetical and historical scholarship and systematic theology.

Manning Clark was a complex, demanding, and brilliant man. Mark McKenna's compelling biography of this giant of Australia's cultural landscape is informed by his reading of Clark's extensive private letters, journals, and diaries, many of which have never been read before. An eye for eternity paints a sweeping portrait of the man who gave Australians the signature account of their own history. It tells of his friendships with Patrick White and Sidney Nolan, it details an urgent and dynamic marriage ripped apart at times by Clark's constant need for extramarital romantic love, a son who wrote letters to his dead parents, a historian who placed narrative ahead of facts, a doubter who flirted with Catholicism, a controversial public figure who marked slights and criticisms with deeply held grudges. To understand Clark's life is to understand twentieth-century Australia, and it raises fundamental questions about the craft of biography: when are letters too personal, comments too hurtful, and insights too private to publish? Clark incessantly documented his life, leaving notes to the biographers he knew would pursue his story. He had a deep need to be remembered, and this book means he will now be understood in an unforgettable way.
